A Proven, Step-by-Step Approach on How to Intentionally Build a Network and Find the Best Job After College with Any Major

Would you like to interview an employer before they interview you? How about find a job before it is posted publicly? What if you could influence your next boss' hiring decision?

Having these types of insights would tremendously impact on your future job choice. But are they possible? The answer is yes; however, you won't find them using conventional methods. They are all quite attainable when you STOP looking for a job and learn how to HIRE an employer.

Following This Method Completely Changed The Course of My Career What does "hiring an employer" entail? It is an approach that empowers you to take control of your job search rather than waiting on employers to respond to you.

In this book I share about my failed attempts to get a job despite graduating from a recognized institution and applying to over 100 positions. Through my failures and ultimate journey to success I learned four key principles: Seek Help, Find Connections, Conduct Informational Interviews, and Learn to Pitch Yourself.

Here are a few results I experienced by following the strategy outlined in this book:

- I went from looking for a job on my own to following advice of mentors who had already done what I was trying to do
- I went from having ZERO contacts in the industry I wanted to work in to building relationship with over 40 professionals in that industry
- I went from having no job offers to deciding between multiple competing offers.
- I ended up calling one employer and declining their offer before even listening to it.
- Most importantly, I didn't just "land a job". I was able to target the top organizations I wanted to work for and strategically placed myself in a career with growth opportunities

Here is a Preview of What You Will Learn When You Download How to Get a Job After College

- How to find a mentor and strategically learn from his or her advice

- How to build a network when you have little or no connections
- How to leverage informational interviews to discover the "top companies" you want to work for
- How to approach professionals for help and get referrals without making the conversation awkward or coming across needy
- How to find out about jobs before they become publically available
- How to sell yourself to an employer when you don't have much experience
- And much, much more!
