Mao Zedong (1893-1976) was a founding member of the Chinese Communist Party. After collaborating with nationalists to resist Japanese invasion Mao led his party to victory in a civil war and proclaimed a People's Republic of China in 1949. His desire to transform a country of peasants into a modern industrial superpower caused huge upheaval during the years of the Great Leap Forward and the Cultural Revolution. Determined above all to protect China's national interests, Mao quarrelled with the Soviet Union and sought reconciliation with America and the West, but remained to his death a committed revolutionary.

The Ten Short Chapters series presents clear and concise accounts of great figures and events in history. Written in a straightforward, no-nonsense style they give brief but informative introductions to historical subjects and are ideal for both students and general readers.
